

SYNTH
PUNK

by MELI

Synthpunk is basically the mix of synthesizers and punk rock. Just how punk goes from noise to pop, synthpunk often incorporates influences from other genres making each project very unique.

Here's some of my favorite albums, if you want more you can check out:

Alice Glass, Fucking
Werewolf Asso, Peaches,
Free Refills, The I.L.Y's,
The Capricorns, P-Model, DAT Politics and Anamanaguchi!

Testosterone

by Talkshow Boy (2006)

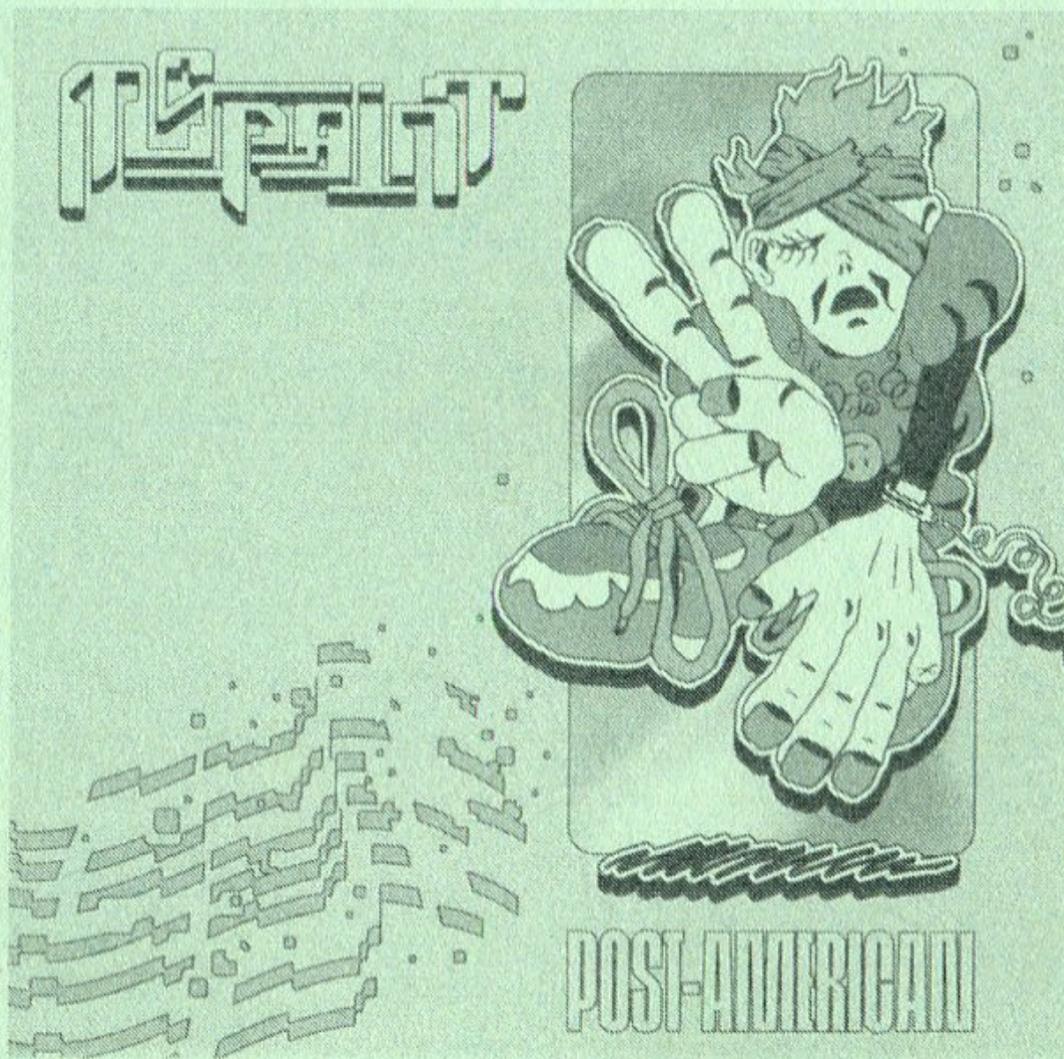

Goofy australian boy sings about animals friends, love and more over cute experimental instrumentals.

Self defined as breakbeat pop, this album takes you on an adventure into Adrian's teenage mind.

Full of weird energy but also very intimate at times, this album has been an obsession to me since the day I found it.

Post-American

by MSPAINT (2023)

I found this like a month ago and I've been showing it to everyone, it's like the 2000s where everyone wanted to be punk or metal cause that was cool and they also tried to put rap elements into whatever they were doing to be as cool as possible, this album combines all of these things perfectly.

Blacklist

by Kap Bambino (2009)

This album has been my default biking music for so long.

It sounds a bit dark overall because of all the distortion and crunchy synths but the fast drums and powerful vocals keep it dynamic and energetic through the whole album.

Todo lo que Quiero Decir es lo que No Quieren Escuchar
by Poder Fantasma (2017)

The world is ending, bombing the president, stealing from the supermarket and finding your own identity. This period of Poder Fantasma is by far my favorite, fast synths and fun lyrics all over the place, the energy on the whole album is crazy. Make sure to check out their older EPs too, they're great!

Wolf BBQ

by Glockabelle (2020)

I hope you don't like it too much cause there's not too much more where this came from and that's the only bad part besides it being too short, this EP is amazing, the cover art is beautiful.
